Mr. Fortney,

When Eric McKinney asked me to write a reference letter for American Constructors, it required no second thought as the project recently completed at Crieewood Baptist Church in south Nashville was a great success. The bottom line is that the $2.2M job to construct a new 12,000 square foot Fellowship Hall and Welcome Center and the renovation of existing Preschool space was completed early and 5% below the GMP. We could not have asked for a better result and believe that we were working with the gold standard for construction in Nashville.

American provided a very professional project superintendent on site, Travis Davis, who was an advocate for Crieewood in insuring the job was done right and for the best possible price. The punch list compiled by the architect and committee was short and I think Travis was offended that we found anything wrong. The worksite was kept clean and safe so that throughout the nine month project, the church never needed to cancel activities nor were we concerned for the safety of the children at the church as part of the Weekday Early Education ministry.

From a communication perspective, American maintained regular communication with the committee on progress against the budget and against the schedule. A church is a unique setting in that there are also many instances of informal communication that takes place as there are many "owners" in a church. American, and specifically Travis Davis, handled these with great patience and professionalism.

In short, I would highly recommend working with American Constructors. Those of us at Crieewood recognize that ours was not one of the many big projects that American takes on, but American never made us feel that we were simply a side project to fill the gap between the big projects. That kind of professionalism is appreciated in any occupation. Crieewood feels blessed by the new and renovated facilities and for the chance to work with American.

If you have any further question about our experience with American Constructors, please do not hesitate to call me at 615-406-9783.
